The Director, OPA will also advise the SECNAV and UNSECNAV regarding the continuity, efficacy, and coherence of all programs and departmental initiatives. Director, OPA shall:

(a) Assess and make recommendations to the SECNAV and UNSECNAV regarding the alignment and efficacy of DON decision support processes.

(b) Oversee and support the Secretariat decision making processes, tracking related follow-up actions and maintaining an ongoing record of all reports and information provided.

(c) Coordinate external advisory groups and initiatives for the SECNAV, including the Secretary of the Navy Advisory Panel and such other consulting initiatives that the SECNAV may require.

8. Delegation of Authority. The SECNAV is frequently assigned additional authorities and responsibilities. Many of these are provided formally, such as through United States Code or public law, DoD directives and instructions, or through written memoranda; others are less formally presented. Regardless of origin, the details of each assignment should be captured and the authority delegated to the appropriate level in the DON. Once the authority is delegated, the organization executing that responsibility should be able to describe their procedures and policies efficiently and authoritatively.

a. The publication of a SECNAV directive as described in reference (g) may be necessary to execute these delegations of authority. SECNAV directives often include a delegation of authority or assignment of responsibility. Directives as described in reference (g) may continue to provide written guidance on selected authorities and responsibilities.

b. Additionally, other delegations may be of a specific nature or for a limited duration and should be considered for inclusion in the delegation of authority database to describe individual assignments of responsibility or delegations of authority. Approved delegations in this database will have the same authoritative assignment and force as any approved SECNAV directive. Directives issued from organizations that have been delegated specific authorities and responsibilities in the delegation of authority database will have the same force as any approved SECNAV directive.

c. Directive issuance authority is granted per reference (g) for the civilian executive assistants and to certain staff assistants for areas in which they have been delegated an authority in this document or in the Delegation of Authority database. Any authorized directive issued under this provision would also have the force of a SECNAV directive since it is empowered by the approved delegation of authority from the SECNAV.

d. Other kinds of issuances may be published by civilian executive assistants and certain staff assistants to describe the procedures and techniques of implementation of delegated authorities. Compliance with the provisions of these issuances is mandatory to the extent specified in the issuance. This includes, but is not limited to, the establishment of these types of issuances:

(1) SECNAV directory is a compilation systematically arranged in alphabetical or classed order, such as a listing of addresses, affiliations, functions, and similar data.

(2) SECNAV handbook is a concise reference book on the technical aspect of a particular subject or a compilation of factual data and instructional material not subject to frequent change.

(3) SECNAV manual is a document consisting of procedures that usually contains examples for performing specific tasks.

9. Records Management. Care must be taken to safeguard and protect records created by SECNAV and his or her staff, regardless of media and format, for they may be considered permanent records and shall be managed in accordance with reference (k).
